Closed Circuit Television is a valuable management and security tool. Garda Crime Prevention Officers normally recommend the installation of a C.C.T.V. system as part of a series of security recommendations generally intended to prevent or detect crime. Closed circuit television can be very effective in maintaining security. Video evidence can help with security enquiries or investigations and assist in securing criminal convictions. The visual recording of incidents, for evidential or investigative purposes, has many benefits and with a competitive customer driven market is no longer cost prohibitive.

C.C.T.V. systems will vary in size and complexity depending on their purpose and the defined security operational requirements. However, the basic purpose of any system will be to observe a scene and the activities that occur within it.
