How long does the recruitment process take?

This is a very frequently asked question, but not one with a definitive answer as each candidate is different. The initial selection stages of the recruitment process are batched, therefore those who score highest at Stage 1, online testing, will be called to Interview first. However, all those who pass Stage 1 will be called for interview during the course of the competition. The timing of the interview will be dependent on your scores at Stage 1, online testing.

Once candidates pass the interview stage, they move across to An Garda Síochána for the Physical Competency Test, Substance Misuse (Controlled Drug) Testing, Medical and Vetting. As each candidate's circumstances are different the length of time to complete all elements of the selection process will vary. It can take between 6-18 months, though a few candidates may fall outside of this timeframe on either side. You will be given 4-6 weeks' notice of your placement in the college once you have successfully completed all selection stages.

I take medication for a pre-existing health condition, will this show up on the Substance Misuse Test?

You will be given an opportunity, prior to your substance misuse test, to declare any medication which you are taking or have taken to the Tester, so this shouldn't cause you any issues.

I'm in the last year of a degree at the moment, will I need to drop out to take up a place if I make it through the recruitment process, or could I defer?

If you are in the final year of completing a degree when offered a place in the Garda College, you may defer your start date to enable you to complete your final year.

Am I guaranteed an appointment if I pass the recruitment process?

Garda Trainees are attested as Members of An Garda Síochána following successful completion of Phase 1 Foundation Training.

Candidates should note that members of An Garda Síochána are required to serve at any Garda Station or centres within the State at the discretion of the Garda Commissioner.

Following attestation Probationer Gardaí will be allocated to Garda Stations, which is predicated by the operational needs and resource requirements of the Organisation across the country.

I have experience of policing elsewhere in a specialist unit, can you fast-track my recruitment and can I join a specialist unit in An Garda Síochána?

No, every new recruit to An Garda Síochána must come through the open recruitment competition, although your experience of policing elsewhere will provide you with a great starting point for your interview and to take on the training.
